

A vibrant, child-like mural. The upper portion features a yellow sky with dark, expressive brushstrokes representing wind or clouds. Various figures are scattered throughout: a person with a pink parachute, several winged children in colorful outfits, and a group of children on the right. Below this, a white horizontal band contains a row of dark rectangular shapes. The lower section shows a building with a red facade on the left and right sides, and a central section with a grid of teal and white panels. Small orange windows are visible within the grid. Two signs on the red walls read 'Valentijnschool'. In the foreground, a green rectangular area with yellow lines is visible, and a grey railing runs across the bottom.

Waar de wind waait gaan mijn voeten

workshop
Beeldende vorming
Valentijnschool Rotterdam

